Dear Finley:

Thanks for sending me your article. I value it very highly because in addition to being well written the article expresses a very original point of view. You are dealing with ideas that no one else even attempts to handle.

In this brief note I must tell you that what I particularly value is to have ideas expressed that reveal me and help me to understand myself. I work out of feeling and intuition and over

"When you observe that my art is an art of regeneration, of perpetual descent and return," I am simply floored, because this is the story of my life, yet I never thought of it in the terms you use.

I don't know how to thank you but I assume and hope that your own insights in writing give you sufficient satisfaction to make you feel independent of anyone's gratitude.

Before too long I would like to see your thoughts presented to a larger audience.

With all best wishes,

Adolph
